

4 January 1955

Major General E. Moore, USAF
Chief of Staff
Headquarters
Military Air Transport Service
Washington 25, D. C.

Dear General Moore:

My apologies for the late answer to your letter of 22 December. I returned just before Christmas from a marvelous trip with your Service and frankly, have not caught my breath until today.

I have looked into the matter of the letter from [redacted] of 20 December, and have asked for a re-examination of employment possibilities. Upon completion of this re-examination, either I or General Cabell will advise you of the outcome.

Our difficulty is in fitting an assignment to her particular qualifications, and I want you to know that I am frankly disappointed that a suitable position has not been found yet. The irony of the situation is that if she were a qualified secretary or typist, we could place her almost immediately, but in spite of a much more exacting education in art, and experience in logistics, the field is narrowed considerably.

I appreciate your letter very much, and hope that if anything further comes up in this matter, you will let me know.

Sincerely,

[redacted]
